Matt de Moiser and His Art

Composite Series

The Composite series are assemblages made from other artists' paintings. They challenge the sanctity that art enjoys, but paradoxically is also constrained by. I had the idea for the work after Adam Cullen shot a hole through my first laminate painting which he purchased at Art Sydney a few years back. At first I was offended, but then I started thinking about it as an act of transformation, rebirth even. Inspired by open source software engineering, sampling and the scientific method, the Composite series builds on the work of other artists to generate new ways of seeing.
